Breukelen bridge When Breukelen's Brooklyn location got overcrowded, owners John Erik Snyder and Thomas Gibson expanded their beloved collection of furnishings and accessories into the Meatpacking District. This new shop on the design-store block—Gansevoort Gallery and H55 occupy neighboring windows—departs from its homegrown roots. Felt sectional couches ($3,015) and raw-coal end tables ($1,000–$2,500) come from such quirky contemporary designers as Paola Lenti in Italy and Burning Relic in New York. Price tags here have a few more zeros than at the Atlantic Avenue outlet, but the same basic concept applies: "I'm not into pedigree," says Snyder. "It's all about the objects." 68 Gansevoort St between Greenwich and Washington Sts (212-645-2216)—Emily Stone
